

The Globe says that three years ago Vice-Admiral Tryon, who was commanding fleet manoeuvres, signalled an order for the identical evolution that resulted in the loss of his ship and his own life. Rear-Admiral Richard E. Tracy, who is now in command of the Malta, was in command of the vessel at the head of the column. He saw the danger involved in carrying on the order and refused to answer the signal. Admiral Tryon waited for fifteen minutes, and, receiving no answering signal, he annulled the order and the signal for the evolution was hauled down. Admiral Tryon raised no question about Rear-Admiral Tracy's refusal to obey the order.

John Deasy, Anti-Parnellite member of the House of Commons for West Mayo, was found guilty to-day of common assault, fined £25 and ordered to pay costs. Deasy was placed on trial on a charge of having assaulted a sixteen-year-old servant girl named Ellen Lewis, employed in a house in which Deasy lodged.

VIENNA, July 19th.
Cholera has reappeared in Moscow, Kieff and North-eastern Hungary. In Moscow the outbreak is most serious.

Dispatches to the Headlines from Rio de Janeiro, via Montevideo and Valparaiso, say that a result has been made upon that town from the land and sea by the revolutionary forces. This result was foreboded when the correspondent called that Admiral Wadellkolk had formally declared in favor of the revolutionists, and had appeared in front of the town of Rio Grande de Sol in a steamship with 500 armed soldiers aboard. When the news of the Admiral's arrival on board the steamship Yupia spread in the town, the citizens were terror-stricken. They feared an immediate attack and many of them abandoned their homes and sought refuge in the country lying to the back of the town.

Admiral Wadellkolk postponed bombardment of the town from the sea until the arrival of the insurgent land forces under General Sarinas, the preconcerted plan being to begin the assault from the land and sea at the same time. Meanwhile the Admiral's force was increased by the crew and officers of the gunboat Catolico, who declared in favor of the revolutionists, and put their vessel under his command. The Government tug-boat Manuel Diabla, while trying to enter the harbour, was fired upon from the gunboat Catolico.

General Sarinas's battalions began massing back of the town yesterday morning and last night the bombardment commenced. The result of the fight is now known, because the Government officers in Rio Grande de Sol seized the telegraph office and refused to allow messages to the town South.

There is great excitement in Montevideo over the reports that there are grave troubles in Rio de Janeiro. A censorship placed on the telegraph wires by the Brazilian Government makes it impossible to confirm reports, but the situation has been serious for some time and it would not be surprising if the story should prove true.

LATE TELEGRAMS.

CALCUTTA, July 19th.
The figures just published seem to show that there has been a decided expansion in trade. The total value of the sea-borne trade of Calcutta last month amounted to 513 lakhs, not including Government stores. This is an increase of 14 per cent on the figures for the corresponding month of 1892, and higher than any month of the present year, except January. Exports alone advanced by nearly 18 per cent, an increase of some 46 lakhs.

SIMLA, July 19th.
There is a chance of the Calcutta Mint being immediately abolished as has been suggested, for when the Mint is opened to the coinage of gold is presumed that with the coinage of silver the Government will have practically as much work as in the past.

The fact that the Secretary of State sold no Council Bills on Wednesday shows that the combination of the Banks is still strong enough to hold out against the Government rate. The question now is whether they will be able to draw upon the alleged hoard of rupees in India and, if so, how long this resource will enable them to be purchased below the Government rate. No gold, of course, has yet come into the Mint of India.

LONDON, July 22nd.
The French Yellow Book covering the years 1885 to 1893 has just appeared, according to which M. Waddington reported to his Government last May a long interview he had had with Mr. Gladstone, who refused to admit the special right of France to take in hand the affairs of Egypt, which he said concerned all the Powers alike. During the civil war in Egypt, M. Develle protested against the attitude of Lord Cromer towards the Khedive, which he said was tantamount to an annulment of the Khedive's authority.

A note from M. Waddington, dated 24th January last, stated that in the event of disturbances in Egypt, France reserved to herself the right to consult the Powers and the Sultan as to necessary measures. Russia also sent a similar note to London.

Lord Rosebery on 1st February, informed M. Waddington that the time was not suitable for the renewal of negotiations for the evacuation of the country by the British, though he was not personally opposed to it.

M. Develle, in a despatch dated 18th February, persisted that an increase in the British forces in Egypt was unnecessary, though he was willing to accept an increase in the native troops as the forerunner of British evacuation.

CATASTROPHE AT CHICAGO.

ISOLATED ON A BURNING TOWER.

(Special to San Francisco Call)

CHICAGO, July 10th.

The fear that has existed for months in the minds of the citizens of Chicago found its realization to-day in a frightful holocaust at the World's Fair that claimed nearly two score victims and for a time threatened the destruction of the entire White City. The disaster is all the more dreadful because of its sudden transformation from an innocent time into a death-dealing catastrophe.

The structure that was burned—the cold storage warehouse—was one of the smallest buildings of the fair, but did not belong to the Exposition, being an exhibit of the Hercules Iron Works, Inc. and refrigerating machine manufacturers. The building contained a skating rink, three 120-ton ice machines, and in it there were stored large quantities of meat, fruit, and some forty barrels of linseed oil, which added fuel to the flames.

That the fire did not spread to the other World's Fair buildings was due to favorable winds.

The scene of horror was witnessed by many thousands of people, who flocked to the locality when the alarm was sounded, and the night was sickening as one life after another was snuffed out within full view of the multitude, but beyond the reach of human aid.

The fire was not generally observed until about 7.15 p.m., and within thirty minutes the great loss of life occurred. At the first signal the firemen rushed up the huge shaft surrounding the smoke-stack and when at the summit began preparations to fight the flames, which first appeared at this point.

Before the hose could be coupled a cry of horror from the crowd below caused the firemen to look down. They saw in an instant the cause of that cry—they were encircled with flames. The men stood stolidly for a moment in full realization of their danger. Then one grasped the rope which had been lowered for the purpose of raising the hose, and half sliding, half falling, reached the roof ninety feet below in a bruised and burned condition, but still alive.

The crowd below became wild with excitement and weeping women and frenzied men rushed around, wringing their hands and moaning in anguish over their inability to render aid.

Suddenly every eye was turned upwards by the preparations of a fireman to jump. He gave a quick, apologetic leap and turned over and over half a dozen times before he struck the roof, ninety feet below. When the body struck the roof there was a frightful crash and it bound far up again into the air.

From this time on bodies rained from the steeps, as after the first wild leap, one man after another jumped in quick succession as the flames closed in below and the heat became more intense.

The very terror of death itself drew every eye to the scene, and while men and women shouted hysterically, the guards were almost powerless to keep the crowd from the danger.

As a firetrap the cold storage warehouse could not have been more perfectly constructed. It was 250 feet long and 150 feet wide. It was made of wood and covered with "stiff," a sort of stucco. The main body of the building was five stories high and in the centre rose the smoke-stack, in the shape of a cupola, 200 feet high. Its base was about 35 feet square, and 50 feet up was a balcony from which rose a tower, communicating in the month of the smoke-stack, where the fire was first discovered. In the interior of the tower were wooden beams and framework on which the "stiff" was laid.

It is supposed the framework around the mouth of the chimney caught fire from a defect in the flue. At first it appeared an insignificant affair, but knowing the inflammable nature of the structure, Fire Marshal Murphy called all the companies out. With about forty of his men Captain Fitzpatrick climbed the ladder inside the tower to the balcony and from there ropes were lowered to haul up the hose. One had been hauled up when the wind caused the flume to break out in an alarming manner about ten feet from the top of the cupola.

Meantime the fire had eaten its way down the inside of the structure and the all-conscious firemen were standing on the shell of a burning volcano. The fire had been burning severely twenty minutes, when suddenly the flames burst out around the base of the balcony in a perfect fury.

So terrible was the spectacle that for a moment the crowds stood transfixed with horror, all alike powerless to aid the unfortunate men imprisoned on the balcony 150 feet from the ground.

All the ropes hanging from the tower were rapidly burned away. One hose withstood the heat, however, and John Davis caught hold of it and slid down to the main roof, where he failed. His face and hands were terribly burned by the flames which enveloped him as he came down. He was taken to the hospital, and the physicians say he will recover.

Two of his fellow-firemen attempted to follow him, but before they were half way down, the hose gave way and they dropped into the seething mass of fire and were lost. Another man started down a portion of rope hanging from the tower, but it gave way and he fell, striking on his head, and was instantly killed.

There now remained, according to the account of various spectators, from twenty-five to thirty men on the tower. They were hopelessly beyond human help, the longest ladder falling short by fifty feet. At this terrible moment Captain Fitzpatrick's tall form appeared in front of the men who were huddled together on the narrow balcony. He seemed to be addressing his brave fellows.

As he ceased speaking one of the men crept around the burning balcony and returned a moment later with a rope. It was hastily fastened to the railing around the balcony and thrown to the roof—Fitzpatrick was seen to point to it and a man started to slide down. But ere he was half way the cruel flames rolled up and he was swallowed in the awful vortex. Another tried it and met the same fate. One after another five of the men at this point sprang from the balcony to the roof. If any survived the awful leap they were burned to death afterwards.

The rope had been burned off about half way down, but Fitzpatrick, seeing the men jumping to their doom, seized the strand and started down. He dropped from the end of the rope and caught on a ladder which had been raised to within twenty feet of it. Fire Marshal Murphy, who was on the roof, sprang forward and soon reached Fitzpatrick. A shout of admiration and encouragement went up, and the heroic marshal started back with his friend, but they were enveloped in flames. With the energy of despair he clutched his comrades and slid down the ladder. Both Murphy and Fitzpatrick were unconscious when picked up. The former, however, was not seriously hurt, but Fitzpatrick is not expected to survive the night.

Scarcely twenty-five minutes had elapsed since the discovery of the fire, but so rapid had been its progress that the entire tower was burned away and fell with an awful crash, carrying with it the unfortunate men who were left on the balcony and several friends who were playing on the flames with a hose from the roof. As the firemen fled from the roof one of them picked up the mangled form of one of the men who had jumped from the balcony and dropped it to the ground, thus saving it from cremation. Seeing that it was a hopeless task to attempt to save the building, and as all who could escape alive had left it, the remaining firemen directed their efforts to keep the flames from spreading. They had already reached the World's Fair stables and the roofs of several hotels across Stony Island avenue, just outside the grounds, were on fire. The hotels were saved with difficulty, but the stables were destroyed. Less than two hours after the fire started the cold storage warehouse was a smoking ruin. It is doubtful if any bodies will be recovered, so furious and terrific was the heat. Work at the burned building is being carried on in the darkness owing to the destruction of the electric light wires. Six bodies, burned beyond recognition, have been taken from the debris since 8 o'clock.

The following is a list of the dead and injured as far as was known at 10 o'clock:—William Davis, killed by jumping; William H. Demming, driven by falling; Martin Kimball, F. Breckenridge, Marshall James L. Kenyon, F. H. Donahoe, H. McFar, W. C. Fisher, G. S. Hamlin, G. B. French, L. Kenyon, W. Lynch, and Fred. Getts. A few weeks ago Martin Kimball was injured at the burned building and reported it to be extremely unsafe. On account of his report the insurance companies cancelled all the risks they had on it, so that the loss is complete.

When the fire broke out there were a large number of visitors in the building, looking at the ice-machines and other exhibits. When the firemen rushed in there was a wild rush for the stairways and exits. In the excitement a number of people were thrown down and badly bruised, though, as far as is known, none were seriously injured.

It is reported by some Columbian Guards that a number of women lost their lives in the building. Firemen discredit the story, but tonight a lady's watch was found on a body so badly burned that it was impossible to tell whether it is that of a man or a woman.

Messages of sympathy from the chiefs of fire departments all over the country have been received by Chief Swenke.

Mayor Harrison was almost overcome when he heard of the calamity, but finally said: "Well, this has settled one thing; the city of Chicago is going to assume control over the Fair buildings as far as protecting life is concerned, and at once to-morrow morning I will see that all buildings are carefully inspected, and wherever changes necessary for the safety of the people are found advisable, they must be made. These things must be looked to, and they will be, if it takes every police officer in Chicago. It is a little late now, but the city will take no more chances."

At midnight the following men were also missing and are said to be lost:—McQuade, engine driver; R. P. Drummond, electrical engineer of the storage building; Howard, lieutenant of engine company and William Hoyt.
